Are courses offered in any other languages than English?

Ian Clayton: USMBOK Author - 2019-08-19 - 0 Comments - in Service Management University

At this time, no. Our objective was to make the courses available to as many as possible from day one, and English is one of the most common languages spoken worldwide. Also, much of the content is created using English. We hope other languages will be included in the future, but this is dependent upon the demand, and the ability to translate courses affordably.

Translation can be an expensive exercise, and another goal of the University is to provide learning at the lowest possible cost to you, the learner. We are always interested in volunteers willing to translate any content. Please contact us by email at University@servicemanagement101.com if this is something you are interested in.
